We have designed our risk workshops to provide a comprehensive plan for attendees to deploy and manage a risk management framework that is an integrated part of their strategy and operations. ”

Keith Ricketts, Vice President of Global Marketing, Sword GRC

March, being held in the iconic One World Trade Center Building in New York. Led by Michael Rasmussen, the GRC Pundit at GRC 20/20 Research, the workshops include a detailed outline of effective risk management strategies, technologies and practices, with the aim that participants will be able to apply their learnings to their own organizations.

The popular full-day events will comprise lectures, peer collaboration and workshop tasks, ending with drinks and canapes, when delegates will have the chance to network with fellow industry peers. Michael Rasmussen is an internationally recognized pundit on governance, risk management, and compliance (GRC), with 25 years of experience. A sought-after keynote speaker, author, and advisor, he is noted as the 'Father of GRC' — being the first to define and model the GRC market in February 2002 while at Forrester Research, Inc. The workshop agendas have been designed to provide delegates with a blueprint to understand risk in a company context, learn how to define a risk management information architecture and identify the technology needed to implement risk management strategies in their own organizations. It will also help delegates to identify roles and integrate risk management processes with the company's departmental structure and business goals.

Keith Ricketts, Vice President of Global Marketing at Sword GRC said; “New regulations, globalization and distributed operations with complex supply chains are all increasing the risk for organizations today. To address these challenges they need a framework for risk management to be an integrated part of their strategy and operations.

“We have designed our workshops to provide a comprehensive plan for attendees to learn how to deploy and manage effective risk management strategies, through a combination of expert
