I am pleased to know that my works will remain long after I am gone.”

Erté

This is the only known, complete Erté collection ever assembled. The only other complete collections of Erté bronze sculptures, not including “Letter F” and “Ibis (Bird Head),” were owned by Elizabeth Taylor and Michael Jackson. Erté (birth name Romain de Tirtoff), a Russian-born French artist and designer was known as the “Father of Art Deco.” He found gratification working with bronze since it came with permanence and longevity. He was proud that his works would remain long after he was gone.

This unparalleled Erté collection totals 205 pieces, consists of 146 bronze sculptures recreated from Erté's costume set designs and Harper's Bazaar illustrations for 22 years. The “Letter F” is the only casting of this sculpture by Erté. The very rare “Ibis (Bird Head),” and a more elegant casting of the second “Ibis” are also part of this complete collection. They are glamorous, culturally diverse and refined with special attention to detail. The collection include 13 objects d'art, 10 medallions, 2 European editions suites, “The Alphabet & Numerals” suites with original portfolio cases, extensive documentation, original brochures, Certificates of Authenticity, receipts of purchase, personal note from Erté to the collector, program for Erté's 90th birthday Retrospective Exhibition and signed limited edition books.

“This is a lifetime opportunity to showcase during this Art Deco Centennial. These are timeless and amazing works of art. A treasured assemblage so rare, it's a privilege to experience viewing them” says Ms. Trace, an artist with a trained eye. Erté's unprecedented exhibit of 170 pieces at the Metropolitan Museum of Art resulted with them being purchased to become part of its permanent collection in 1967. His fashion designs are ageless, enduring in inspiration to current times. Beyoncé collaborated with designer Peter Dundas with his Erté inspired gown recently for 2017 Grammy Awards. Ms. Trace plans to publish a photo book based on this collection to commemorate the artist and his works in this Centennial celebration of the Art Deco Era.

Erte was renowned worldwide for designs for theatre, film and fashion. His illustrations appeared in publications including Vogue, Cosmopolitan and 22 years in Harpers Bazaar. His stage designs were global including New York Radio City Music Hall, Ben Hur set in Hollywood, Folies-Bergere in Paris and more. museum collections such as those in the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Museum of Modern Art in New York City, Los Angeles County Museum, Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., and the Victoria & Albert Museum in London. His popularity among recognized artists included Brooke Shields, Barbara Streisand, Gloria Vanderbilt, Diana Ross, Bianca Jagger and many others.
