

Supreme Court "Public Charge" Ruling Will Exacerbate Poverty, Inequality and Hardship

More people will be forced to turn to charitable organizations to get food, diapers, period supplies, and other basic necessities as a result of ruling.

NEW HAVEN, CT, UNITED STATES, January 27, 2020 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The National Diaper Bank Network has issued the following statement from CEO Joanne Goldblum, in response to today's decision by Supreme Court of the United States to allow the Trump administration's "public charge" rule to be implemented nationwide.

This policy moves our country backwards, hurting children, families, and communities ... we need to invest in common-sense solutions that enable families to thrive and live full, productive lives.”

“The National Diaper Bank Network is very disappointed with today's Supreme Court decision to allow the Administration's public charge rule to take effect nationwide. As we have stated previously, forcing families to choose between their American dream or health care, food, housing, and other basic necessities, endangers the well-being of legal immigrants and their children, many of whom are US citizens.”

“This callous public policy choice exacerbates poverty, inequality, and hardship. Without government resources available to them, more people will be forced to turn to charitable organizations to get food, diapers, period supplies, and other basic necessities. The expected increase in people seeking help will further strain the limited resources of nonprofits and their ability to meet the needs of the communities they serve. Diaper banks across the country will see increased demand for their services at a time when we know we are only meeting a small percentage of overall need. This policy moves our country backwards, hurting children, families, and communities. Instead, we need to invest in common-sense solutions that enable families to thrive and live full, productive lives.”

About the National Diaper Bank Network:

The National Diaper Bank Network (NDBN) is a nationwide nonprofit dedicated to eliminating diaper need in America, by leading a national movement to help meet the basic needs of all babies and their families...including access to clean, dry diapers and other material goods. Founded in 2011, the network raises national awareness of diaper need (#DiaperNeed) and supports the development and expansion of diaper banks in communities throughout the country. Its active membership includes more than 200 diaper banks, diaper pantries, and food banks located in 49 U.S. states and the District of Columbia. More information on NDBN and diaper need is available at www.nationaldiaperbanknetwork.org, and on Twitter (@DiaperNetwork), Instagram (@DiaperNetwork) and Facebook (facebook.com/NationalDiaperBankNetwork).
