Leveraging the expertise and efficiency of Midland, clients can now establish an individual, joint, or trust account to invest in alternative investments such as real estate, hedge funds, venture capital, start-up companies, private equity, and much more.

Alternative investments offer greater diversification, potentially higher returns, and the comfort of investing in something more familiar. However, the process of investing in alternatives and the on-going administration can be cumbersome. By making investments through

Midland, clients will gain the ability to electronically complete documents with the assistance of a transaction specialist and be able to monitor the performance of their investments over time.

Dave Owens, President and CEO of Midland, said, “Part of our company’s values are to be responsive, evolving constantly to serve our industry in new ways and meeting our clients’ changing needs. Custodial accounts now offer our clients a simple, efficient way to invest and save for their retirement without the use of an IRA account.”

There are three easy steps to get started with a custodial account:

1. Open an account at Midland Trust Company.
2. Fund the account.
3. Make the investment.

Let Midland Trust simplify the alternative investment process and administration for your non-IRA money.
