Maybe you had to meet with an attorney to plan your estate, draw up a will, or even sell a piece of property. Perhaps you've talked with an attorney over a neighborly dispute or to select a Power of Attorney. If you have, you know just how valuable an attorney's insight can truly be. If you've never talked with a lawyer before, or you've never dealt with one after facing an auto accident, you might be feeling a bit overwhelmed. You might wonder what to expect when it comes to meeting with an auto accident lawyer.

Each year, automobile accidents change lives. Nearly 1.25 million people die every year in car accidents, according to the Association for Safe International Road Travel. This includes approximately 400,000 deaths of people who are under 25 years of age. Whether you've been in an accident before or this is your first time dealing with a vehicle collision, it's important to consult with an attorney so you can carefully understand what your choices are.

Depending on the severity of your injuries, you may need to meet with an auto accident lawyer in Philadelphia so you can discuss compensation. You may need to seek damages in order to cover the cost of medical care, as well as lost wages. Understand that your lawyer wants you to experience the best possible outcome. This is why your lawyer will listen to your experiences, ask you questions about what happened, and help you create a plan for moving forward.

Before you schedule a consultation to talk with an attorney, however, there are a few things you need to know.

Choosing an Auto Accident Lawyer in Philadelphia, PA

The right auto accident lawyer in Philadelphia, PA understands exactly what you're going through. Your lawyer knows that you didn't plan to get into a car accident and you may not know how you can best move forward. It's normal to go through periods of shock, fear, or anxiety after you've been in a car accident. Fortunately, your attorney can help.

Select an attorney who specializes in automobile accidents in your area. Remember that each area of law is specialized and specific, so it's important to choose an experienced lawyer who understands the ins and outs of car accidents. Even if you don't understand the law very well, rest assured that your lawyer will.

You should also meet with an attorney who is experienced. The right attorney will be able to listen to your case and evaluate your options. They'll let you know what your next steps should be. Furthermore, your attorney can give you different options and discuss what you can expect moving forward.

Preparing for Your Appointment

When you prepare to meet with your lawyer, understand that you will need to carefully discuss the car accident. You'll need to tell your attorney everything that happened involving the accident. Even if you are partially responsible for the accident, you should tell your lawyer. Never lie or withhold information. Your attorney can't help you if they don't have all of the facts. More importantly, if your attorney doesn't know something that happened, but the insurance investigators or opposing counsel does, this could impact your case. Always disclose as much information as possible when you meet with your attorney.

You'll also want to bring as much evidence with you as possible. If you filed a police report when the accident occurred, bring a copy to your attorney. This is one of the most valuable pieces of evidence you can bring since it shows exactly what happened, as well as when and where the accident took place. You should also bring any pictures you have of your injuries or of the accident itself. Did you film a video after the accident? Bring that, too. The more information you can provide, the better.

Make sure you also bring any medical bills you received. If you have copies of your health records, these are also important. Remember that your attorney will build a case to demonstrate how much the accident impacted your life. Having medical bills and records that detail your injuries can be quite beneficial.

When you're ready to get the help you deserve, reach out to schedule an appointment. Call HGSK at 267-350-6600 to talk about your options for moving forward.
