One of the missions of the paramilitary Bassij members trained in this Complex was throwing acid on the faces of women in Isfahan on the bogus pretext of mal-veiling. On October 20, 2014, the British daily, The Guardian, quoted local media as saying that attackers riding on motorbikes threw acid on eight women's faces in Isfahan. One of the women, according to The Guardian, lost full sight in one of her eyes.

Simultaneously, defiant youth torched a number of paramilitary Bassij bases, billboards, and posters of Khamenei and Qassem Soleimani as well as the regime's propaganda posters on the anniversary of their coming to power in Tehran and other cities, including Shiraz, Tabriz, Kermanshah, Karaj, Semnan, Zarqan (Fars Province), Iranshahr, Behbahan, Ilam, Khorramabad, and Gonbad.
