

Pasadena Cleanup Helps Safeguard and Improve the Environment

What one mother is doing to help her kids learn to respect the environment.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA, UNITED STATES, February 11, 2020 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Amy, a mother of two boys, has a special way of celebrating certain days of the year. Beginning in June 2018 on World Environment Day, she created a movement for Pasadena that helps to clean up the city. On the International Day of Happiness and four other occasions, Amy rallied kids and adults and hit the streets.

Amy is an Altadena resident who was inspired by The Way to Happiness booklet, a common-sense guide to better living. One of the 21 precepts is "Safeguard and Improve Your Environment."

Over a dozen kids and parents helped clean up the park in Pasadena as part of The Way to Happiness project, sponsored by the Church of Scientology of Pasadena.

"I wanted to teach kids, our future leaders, The Way to Happiness, and doing a cleanup is an easy way for them to get practical experience with the results when applying one of the precepts. Plus cleaning up our planet and keeping it clean is very important for our future," she says.

The community is invited to join in the next cleanup on April 19, the Sunday before Earth Day.
