

Hungarian Defence Forces Command to present modernisation plans at Future Armoured Vehicles Situational Awareness

Brigadier General Attila Takacs, Hungarian Defence Forces Command will present at Future Armoured Vehicles Situational Awareness Conference in London this April

LONDON, UNITED KINGDOM, February 11, 2020 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Last year, the German defence company Krauss-Maffei Wegmann (KMW) secured a contract in December to provide 44 new Leopard 2A7+ tanks and 24 new PzH 2000 self-propelled howitzers to the Hungarian Armed Forces.

The $565m contract also includes 12 used Leopard 2 A4 tanks for training purposes. Hungary aims to upgrade the weapons and equipment of the defence forces under a military modernisation programme by 2026.

With this in mind, the Future Armoured Vehicles Situational Awareness conference, taking place on the 1st and 2nd April 2020 in London, will explore Hungary's modernisation plans and how they are improving situational awareness across their platforms.

Brigadier General Attila Takacs, Service Inspector of Land Forces, Hungarian Defence Forces Command will present an exclusive briefing on day two of the conference on 'Generating Effective Mass for the Future: Hungarian Land Forces 2026', which will cover:

- Zrínyi 2026 Program and its implications for the armoured capabilities
- Future armoured platform concept
- The acquisition of Leopard 2A7

The event brochure including the two-day agenda and speaker line-up is available to download online at <http://www.armouredvehicles-sa.com/EINpr7>

This year's meeting will provide a comprehensive overview of crucial developments, calling on the experience of military programme managers, operational commanders and leading engineers in the market. As well providing exclusive industry insights, the packed agenda
