

Parker University adds Magnesphere whole-body magnetic resonance therapy to Human Performance Centers

"We have been following the Magnesphere for some time and have seen the effectiveness. We are very excited to be able to provide this for our patients."

CLEARWATER, FLORIDA, UNITED STATES, February 18, 2020 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Synapse: Human Performance Centers, inspired by and located on the campus of Parker University, is pleased to announce the purchase of the Magnesphere magnetic resonance therapy device from Magneceutical Health, of Clearwater, FL. The Magnesphere provides a very low-level, uniform magnetic field aimed at reducing hyperactive sympathetic issues, commonly experienced during chronic stress.

"The Magnesphere is an exciting tool that will be utilized in our Synapse: Human Performance Center", says Parker University Vice Provost, Patrick Bodnar, DC. "We have been following the product and the company for some time and have seen first-hand the effectiveness of the Magnesphere. We are very excited to be able to provide this for our patients."

Magneceutical Health recently showcased the Magnesphere at the recent Parker Seminars - Las Vegas to many interested chiropractors.
