Fifty five percent of the population uses some form of Marijuana or CBD. Marijuana is currently legal in 11 states for adults over the age of 21, and legal for medical use in 33 states. President Donald Trump also signed the bipartisan Farm Bill into law in December 2018, which legalized hemp — a plant that's roughly identical to marijuana but doesn't contain THC, a psychoactive compound in marijuana — nationwide. State legislatures across the U.S. have convened for new sessions over the past month, and a growing number of governors are taking steps to push lawmakers to include legalizing marijuana as part of their 2020 agendas.
