challenges during the session one of day one.

He said on the opening day of the conference, selected ambassadors from the continent resident in Ghana would share with delegates how their countries received the news on the AfCFTA and what they were doing to enhance and ensure the successful implantation and achievement of the Continental Free Trade Area.

It would also provide the opportunity to experience academicians to answer the question on "Africa – Can Salvation be found in AfCFTA?"

He added that other topics to be discussed include; senior officers from the Ports, Customs and Immigration sharing with delegates their readiness to foster and harness the successful implementation of the AfCFTA, role of regional and development finance institutions, telecommunications, digital solutions and state actors.

He said delegates would also be exposed to the role of Central Banks in harmonising the payment systems within AfCFTA, while others would assemble heads of Chamber of Commerce from the continent to look at "Industries' readiness for AfCFTA; Leveraging on the Opportunities for Businesses.

Talk on the harmonisation of trade unions on the continent in the context of AfCFTA, would also be done during the conference, while heads of Journalists from three African Countries would join the president of the GJA to look at the role of the media in the implementation of AfCFTA.
