LOS ANGELES, CA, USA, February 18, 2020 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Fathers of the Sport is a featured documentary which uncovers the colorful and compelling history of legendary playground basketball. The documentary is produced by Providence Films, another subsidiary of Valiant Eagle Inc., and directed by Xavier "X" Mitchell. It chronicles the history and lives of many legends and unsung heroes who dominated playground basketball courts of New York, Philly, DC, and Chicago in their earlier years, consequently turning it into the multi-billion dollar spectator sport it is today. Featuring images, music, and footage from the 60's and 70's, Fathers of the Sport tells the story of an American social culture embedded with racism, war, oppression, and poverty. These asphalt warriors escaped and rose above it all with a mutual love and respect for the game that many feel has been lost on today's players.

Schooled on urban courts across America, self-trained athletes brought style to the NBA that sorely lacked excitement and retail entertainment value. The playgrounds convergence with the NBA was a major turning point in the history of basketball, the game was forever changed. The legacy of these playground athletes is seen in all aspects of professional basketball today and Fathers of the Sport pays homage to its urban playground roots.

From Rucker Park to The Baker League and beyond, the legendary players' courage, fire and on-court determination is translated into a celebration of their accomplishments. The participation of basketball legends such as Joe "Jellybean" Bryant (Associate Producer and father of Kobe Bryant), Lucius Allen (President-NBA's Retired Players Association of LA) and other basketball "royalty" has provided extraordinary strength in regards to validity and access into the worlds and lives of these players. Fathers of the Sport provides a historic and honest account of the origin and history of playground basketball.
