Typically, asbestos exposure will have occurred sometime between the 1950s and the 1980s. Some of the most prevalent professions that encountered large quantities of asbestos include power plant workers, maritime workers, industrial workers, plumbers, pipefitters, electricians, mechanics, machinists, miners, railroad workers and construction workers, to name a few. Since the latency period for mesothelioma patients is approximately 40 years, most people diagnosed with mesothelioma or asbestos-related lung cancer in 2020 were exposed decades ago.

Northern Georgia near the foot of the Appalachian Mountains is a mineral-rich area containing 17 former asbestos mines. A vast majority of asbestos deposits from the Appalachian Mountain Range are located in Rabun and White counties. Power generation and manufacturing are two of many industries associated with asbestos exposure in Georgia.

Known jobsites, companies and buildings with asbestos exposure include Bowen Power Plant, Keebler Company, CSX Transportation Inc., the Centers for Disease Control building in Atlanta,
