Market Dynamics:

Soil Conditioner is used in agriculture and gardening due to its versatile benefits such as soil remediation, reduces fertilizer runoff, improves water retention, stimulates plant enzymes, increases microbial activity, boosts seed germination, promotes root development, encourages plant growth by an increased biomass production, Increases yield and improves quality of plants and many other things. Soil conditioner results in increased yield both qualitatively and quantitatively. These factors will boost the market in forecast period.

Further, Increase in Fertilizers prices will boost the soil conditioner market. Proper use of soil conditioner reduces the need for chemical fertilizers which saves costs. Also, a large number of soil conditioner products are organic certified. So the increase in organic farming will further improve demand for soil conditioners.

Low awareness about the role of soil quality in agriculture is limiting the growth of the market.

Segment Analysis:

Soil Conditioner market is segmented by Type and application. By Type, the market is segmented into Organic and Inorganic soil conditioners. The organic segment includes Plant-based and Animal-based products. Organic soil conditioner products are mainly prepared from manure or green manure since they are the cheapest source of organic matter available. Leguminous crops are especially favoured as green manure because they add nitrogen to the soil. Organic segment dominates the market due to wide availability. The inorganic segment consists of Polymers and minerals. Gypsum is the most common mineral used as a soil conditioner. Polymeric soil conditioner such as certain polysaccharides, polyacrylamides has emerged recently. They act as a synthetic binding agent. Inorganic soil conditioners have a minor share of the market due to limited applicability.
