

The 6 Best Business Travel Apps Besides JustFly and FlightHub

BELLEVUE, WA, UNITED STATES, March 4, 2020 /EINPresswire.com/ --

Business travelers make up just over a tenth of commercial flight passengers according to Investopedia. While 12% is a relatively small number, when considered as a portion of the more than 1.4 billion annual global travelers, it's nearly 170 million business travelers per year. Suffice to say, it's a large number of people, with collective access to millions of apps.

The right travel app can be the difference between a successful business trip and a potentially terrible one. The following apps weren't all designed with business travel in mind.

That said, they've found homes in the smart devices of many travelers.

FlightHub and JustFly shed light on 6 of the top business travel apps (Android and iOS) available right now.

Apps on a Smartphone

Triplt:

Triplt is a must-have app for leisure and business travelers alike. Monitor several flights, confirmation information, important addresses and accommodation bookings. Find nearby places to eat, car rental agencies as well as local weather reports. Perhaps one of the best Triplt features is the app's ability to siphon through email inboxes to detect relevant travel confirmations, which are in turn added to the user's Triplt profile.

Concur:

Concur is arguably the best app for tracking business expenditures, filing, invoicing and refunds. Quickly take photos of receipts, save them for later or submit expenses immediately. Use the app's step-by-step processes to request company reimbursements while on the go.

Google Translate:

Finding ways to communicate effectively in foreign countries can at times be difficult due to language barriers. With voice recognition technology steadily improving and becoming more popular in recent years, Google Translate is the answer to most communication problems while abroad. It's as simple as typing, saying or photographing what needs to be translated. It's compatible with over 100 languages and gives users access to an offline translation library as well.

DocuSign:

DocuSign allows business travelers to go paperless. Sign important contracts and other types of documents digitally from anywhere. It's compatible with smartphones and a range of tablets.

Another important feature of the app is that it encrypts the contents of all sent documents.

DUFL:

Carrying luggage is one of the least enjoyable parts of any kind of travel. The DUFL app is a simple solution. First, DUFL suitcases are sent for travelers to pack. Next, the suitcases are picked up, the contents are cleaned and stored. Once the trip details are entered, DUFL then sends the suitcases to the appropriate destination. At the end of each trip, luggage can be sent back home or to another destination via the app as well.

GateGuru:

For business travelers who find themselves in airports more often than most, the GateGuru app is indispensable. Receive timely updates on arrival and departure times as well as boarding information. In addition, travelers have access to airport maps, restaurants, reviews and approximate wait times for TSA verification points. GateGuru also provides pertinent airline updates and car rental help.

These apps should be staples in smart devices for business travelers everywhere. They provide a range of useful tools: from packing, flights and accommodation, to translation and documents. The above listed apps keep users sharp and allow them to direct their attention to what matters most, business.
