the Box! announced today that it is recommending several holistic supplements and therapies to help prevent and combat the current coronavirus (COVID-19) outbreak. The recommendations are based on a recent order from the Chinese government that its physicians use a combination of vitamin C IVs and traditional Chinese herbs to treat infected patients. Chinese patients who have leveraged the recommended therapies have responded quickly and showed improved recovery rates.

The recommended coronavirus protocol was created by Docs Outside the Box! after a thorough review of how COVID-19 is currently being treated in China. The recommend treatments include patients taking a number of supplements including Pneumatrophin PMG, Immuplex, Lauricidin, Congaplex, and Colloidal Silver. The supplements are taken in various combinations depending on the stage and severity of infection.

Docs Outside the Box! Is led by Medical Director, Leah Teekell-Taylor, M.D., and by Lana Garner, DOM. The medical practitioners have worked together to establish an innovative healthcare approach that blends traditional and holistic medical techniques. Patients meet with both a Medical Doctor (M.D.) and a Doctor of Oriental Medicine (DOM). During the initial meeting the doctors act as a team, spend significant time with the patients, and educate patients on the potential care plans and treatments that are available across each modality.

“A recent publication followed a select set of coronavirus patients in Wuhan,” said Leah Teekell-Taylor, M.D Medical Director of DOCS Outside the Box!. “The report showed positive treatment outcomes in patients that leveraged a combination of western medicine with select Chinese herbs.”
