

Apple Self Storage Offers Free Storage to Students

Apple Self Storage offers free storage to students affected by school closures due to Coronavirus (COVID-19).

AURORA, ONTARIO, CANADA, March 13, 2020 /EINPresswire.com/ -- In response to the Coronavirus (COVID-19), many colleges and universities are temporarily closing or sending students home as a precaution to prevent further spread of the virus. Apple Self Storage wants to help those students who may be quickly trying to find a storage solution for their belongings by offering free storage to those affected until May 1. There may be limited availability depending on the region. Locations can be found at applestorage.com, and customers can rent online as well, with no need to come in to the office.

In addition to this free storage, Apple Self Storage also offers boxes and packing supplies to help students move quickly. We can help get everything needed so students and families can focus on what's most important.

We believe it is important that we aim to support one another. Many are frightened and feeling vulnerable, so let us find ways to take an approach of understanding and kindness to those in need.”

David Allan

In uncertain times like these, we believe it is important that we aim to support one another. Many people are frightened and feeling vulnerable, so let us find ways to take an approach of understanding and kindness to those in need. As a community, we can work together to build a solid foundation of support and safety.
