

Human Connection: A New Virtual Reality Game launches Kickstarter Campaign

Now Seeking Community Support via Kickstarter, This Game is One Step Ahead of Social Networks in Joining the Humans.

DENVER, COLORADO, UNITED STATES, March 26, 2020 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The actual situation forces us to be separated, let's use virtual reality to re-connect with others. With more human interaction, better human connections can be made and keeping this simple fact in mind, a Colorado based American game development team has blended innovation and technology in a whole new way. This new virtual reality based game is called Human Connection, and it takes the concept of connecting the worlds to the next level. Moreover, the game developers have recently launched a crowdfunding campaign on Kickstarter, and they are welcoming generous support and backing.

"Players will be able to solve challenges with anyone in the world and will learn about new cultures as well as new people in this collaborative game." Said Felipe Berckemeyer, a seasoned American educator and the founder of Human Connection, while introducing this project to the Kickstarter community. "The random factor makes each game different and it is fun not to know the partner that you will play with." He added.

The Kickstarter Campaign is located on the web at:

www.kickstarter.com/projects/medea/human-connection and all funds raised through this Kickstarter campaign will play a major role in the development and launch of this game. Moreover, the goal of this Kickstarter campaign is to raise a sum of US$ 24,300 and the creators of this game are launching this game for the smartphone users worldwide on both iOS and Android platforms. Furthermore, more details are available on the Kickstarter campaign page of the project.
