

Elizabeth Stanton, The Worldwide Spokesperson for Popstar!, Addresses Young People at Risk of Coronavirus

"Nobody should feel invulnerable to the coronavirus. Young people are going to contract the disease." – Elizabeth Stanton

LOS ANGELES, CA, UNITED STATES, March 27, 2020 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Despite health officials' pleas to stay home and avoid spreading the coronavirus, young people have been packing beaches & hiking trails, picnicking in parks, and flying to far-flung destinations on the cheap. But as the pandemic rackets up with 417,000 cases and counting across the world, it is becoming increasingly apparent that coronavirus affects large numbers of people below 50. In New York City, health officials said that of 1,160 people hospitalized with COVID-19 symptoms, one in four were between ages 18 and 49. Across the United States, about 38% of coronavirus patients sick enough to be hospitalized were ages 20 to 54, the CDC reported last week.

Young people need to realize the magnitude of the situation and must take this seriously. Thankfully, some individuals and organizations are here to reach out to young people, giving them factual reality checks on the pandemic. The Popstar! Network has much to say on the matter along with Elizabeth Stanton, the Worldwide Spokesperson for Popstar!.

Check out Elizabeth Stanton's thoughts below:

Currently, a novel coronavirus, SARS-CoV-2, is spreading across the globe, causing a new coronavirus disease, or COVID-19. Nobody should feel invulnerable to the coronavirus. Young people are going to contract the disease as well. The rates of severe and deadly cases might not be nearly as high as the elderly, but the data already show that age alone does not make you invincible. If you do find yourself infected, call a doctor immediately and follow the same rules that those who wish to remain healthy follow. Is there any good news? Well, take the proper steps in treatment and prevention is possible. Most people with the COVID-19 virus have a mild disease and recover.

People with COVID-19 generally develop signs and symptoms, including mild respiratory symptoms and fever, on an average of 5-6 days after infection and can last up to 14 days. If you have any pre-existing respiratory conditions, such as asthma, you need to take isolation and shelter at home very seriously as that is the most effective way to stay healthy. If you have had or have heart disease, diabetes, high blood pressure, lung disease, or cancer, you must take extra precaution. If you must go out, take gloves at the very least or hand wipes in case you have to get gas or groceries. Wipe down the gas pump where you enter your information as well as the handle itself. If you are grocery shopping, absolutely wipe down all grocery cart handles.
