

The Clearwater Community Volunteers Help from Home

Volunteers of the Clearwater Community Volunteers band together to create educational "how to" videos from home to help local nonprofits grow.

CLEARWATER, FL, UNITED STATES, April 2, 2020 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Volunteers of the Clearwater Community Volunteers (CCV) Center have resolved to help their community from home by creating informational Facebook videos to help local nonprofits or to share good news with their neighbors. Such "how to" videos include: how to facilitate charity work; or scheduled interviews with community activists and artists that highlight their works. The videos are available on the Clearwater Community Volunteers Center Facebook page.

By way of example, Petrina Sharp, a freelance artist who has created paintings for many hotels, including the Ritz Carlton of Santa Barbara, made a video demonstration of how to blend and shade paint for a professional grade painting for Girl Scouts Troop 32728 who are creating artwork for group homes.

"We invite any nonprofit to request a video from our volunteers on subjects of interest," said Michael Soltero, Manager of the CCV Center. "Sometimes it can be hard to figure out how to achieve the change you want to see as a nonprofit, so our volunteers are here to help make that happen."

Upcoming videos include demonstrations on utilizing social media to increase a nonprofit's reach into the community by Markets for Makers founder Natalie Nagengast, to growing organic vegetables with limited space using "tower gardening" with Master Gardener, Jai McFall.

"Our volunteers are looking for creative ways to help others," said Michael Soltero, Manager of the CCV Center. "Truly, we could not do what we do for our community without their support and determination to make a difference."
