Emeralds are gem-quality specimens of the beryl mineral family with a rich, distinctly vibrant green color. They are found in igneous, metamorphic, and sedimentary rocks in a small number of locations across the world. Emeralds vibrant green color and their gorgeous hue have been a pretty addition to pieces of value throughout the ages and have been focal point to the earrings. The global emeralds earrings market is anticipated to witness a considerable growth owing to increasing disposable income and consumer spending on luxury goods.
