Facts about girls around the world, Only 6 countries give women equal legal work rights as men. The World Bank's recent measured gender discrimination in 187 countries. It found that only 6 countries scored full marks on eight indicators, from receiving a pension to freedom of movement, influencing economic decisions women make during their careers. A typical economy only gives women three-quarters the rights of men in the measured areas.

Educational Inequity, from a global perspective, one of the biggest challenges facing women is educational inequality. Despite the many gains of modern feminist movements many still believe that women are less worthy of the same educational opportunities afforded to men. Launching a YouTube Channel along with Facebook live will create an opportunity to share knowledge, personal experiences as well as success stories to females on line around the world. the channel will encourage them, inspire them and motivate them to change their circumstances and change their lives.

33,000 girls become child brides every day. Globally, 12 million girls each year get married before the age of 18, roughly 33,000 every day, or one every two seconds. There are some 650 million women alive today who were child brides. The reasons behind it vary between communities, but it's often because girls are not valued as highly as boys and marrying them off at a young age transfers the 'economic burden' to another family.

The Every Girl Wins Institute was created based on the life skills and observations of women of the world from the founder. What she has experienced is the beliefs of women are holding them back from creating the life they deserve. Over and over again, she would hear women talk about not being confident enough or worthy enough because of certain circumstances that have happened in their lives.

The founder herself had also experienced the same things in her own life from childhood poverty, being a child bride with three children by the time she was eighteen. Having been abused physically, mentally, emotionally, and sexually, she understands suffering and feeling unworthy. She never let that stop her from winning and creating the life she deserved.

As a women's life skills expert she is here to show all women of the world, they also can succeed
