/EINPresswire.com/ -- Business processes company KDG has been named a 2020 Forbes Small Giants finalist. This is the second time the Allentown company has been recognized. It also received the honor in 2019.

The Small Giants Community was established to celebrate purpose-driven businesses and their leaders. While these companies may be “small,” they build large and lasting relationships with their employees, stakeholders, and wider communities.

“

For nearly two decades, KDG has been a company that remains dedicated to doing right by our employees, our clients, and our community.”

Kyle David, CEO

To earn the nomination, KDG submitted an extensive application outlining its company culture, social responsibility, industry innovations, and employee satisfaction. The company’s open-book financial policy, its unique customer feedback process, and its “cheerworthy” company culture helped the organization stand out amongst competitors. “For nearly two decades, KDG has been a company that remains dedicated to doing right by our employees, our clients, and our community,” says Kyle David, president and CEO of KDG. “We are grateful that Forbes seeks to recognize these organizations that are making an impact.”
