

Boost Oxygen Donates to the Connecticut Food Bank for Coronavirus Relief Efforts

Boost is a Milford-based company operating as an essential business

MILFORD , CT, UNITED STATES, April 14, 2020 /EINPresswire.com/ -- As the entire world unites to fight the coronavirus pandemic, we are reminded daily of the heroic efforts of those operating on the front-line including doctors, nurses and paramedics. Backing them up in the fight are millions of other essential workers - pharmaceutical companies testing new treatments and cures, manufacturing companies developing medical supplies, truck drivers making those important deliveries, grocery store employees, and food bank workers, who are helping to provide for people who have suddenly lost their income.

"We appreciate this gift from Mr. Neuner and Boost Oxygen because it comes at such a critical time of need," said Beverly Catchpole, Connecticut Food Bank Senior Director of Development. "Hundreds of thousands of Connecticut residents are suddenly finding themselves without work and many are struggling to put food on the table."

While everyone joins to stop the virus, the economic impact for millions of Americans has been severe. Paying rent, utility bills and even providing basic meals has become a concern for so many families. The good people who operate food banks across our nation have seen this firsthand, in growing numbers like never before, and this initial donation of $5,000 is to support the good work of Connecticut Food Bank.

"Every day, so many parents and children rely on schools to provide multiple daily meals. With our schools now closed for the foreseeable future, food banks are stepping up to meet those now critical needs for so many people, especially in inner cities. We are glad to donate to Connecticut Food Bank in support of their efforts...and we will continue to do so in the future." says Rob Neuner, Boost Oxygen CEO and Co-Founder.
