La Bouche - One Night In Heaven

The back story of 'One Night In Heaven' goes as follows: "Back in 1995, my late partner Melanie Thornton and I recorded a large collection of songs for our albums. We had recorded many hits but could only fit a certain amount of songs on a CD. This particular song was originally produced by the sensational Armir Saraf (Beam Records). Since our La Bouche album was already complete and released, the song was catalogued and shelved. Melanie and I always loved this track and often performed it in our live shows where the fans responded favorably and wanted us to release it and to the credit of Amir Saraf a collection of three songs were released in 2007 under the moniker of 'Le Click' McCray says".

It's all about timing and now is that time. I have a lot of treasures in the vaults that will be making its way to the loving & loyal La Bouche fans around the world"

Lane McCray

"Since Melanie's passing in 2001 (RIP), I have continued the legendary legacy of La Bouche around the world reaching hundreds of thousands of fans both old and new through live performances and millions via varied social media, television, radio and streaming platforms.

During this time, fans kept asking me to cover these unreleased La Bouche tracks and as with everything - it's all about timing and now is that time. I have a lot of treasures in the vaults that will be making its way to the loving & loyal La Bouche fans around the world" says McCray.
