

Pulitzer Prize nominated journalist explores encounters with God

'Beyond the Sphere: Encounters with the Divine' released

ALBANY, NEW YORK, UNITED STATES, April 29, 2020 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Pulitzer nominated investigative journalist Alfred Stefan Guart today launched his first book - a bold look into "Divine Visitations" and the impact they've had on civilization from biblical times until today.

"Every major religion can be traced back to accounts of Divine Visitation," said Guart. "It's time to examine these accounts and the beliefs about God, humanity and the universe they've engendered."

"Beyond the Sphere" (published by Balboa Press) is a groundbreaking book that challenges existing beliefs about God and urges readers to seek their own unfiltered encounters with the Divine. In it, Guart relives his own encounters with the "Origin of Life" in riveting prose - the kind of clear-headed writing forged by his years as a hard news journalist in both print and television.

Excerpt:

"There was no point where this Entity started or ended. I could not say it was standing over there or it came from that direction. It was everywhere at once. The communication taking place was instant, complete and silent. No words, no symbols or sounds. Yet any misunderstanding was impossible. This was a communion, not a conversation."

Every major religion can be traced back to accounts of Divine Visitation. It's time to examine these accounts and the beliefs about God, humanity and the universe they've engendered."

"Beyond the Sphere" examines the lives of some who allege to have had various forms of contact with heaven, from biblical figures to Buddha to Neale Donald Walsch, author of the 1986 sensation "Conversations with God," who was interviewed for this book.

Early review:

"The writing is lucid as a mountain stream. More importantly, I was captivated by the content. Al performs the neat trick of getting as close as one can to defining the ineffable."

-Anthony Mancini, award-winning journalist, novelist and director of the Journalism Program at Brooklyn College, City University of New York.
