

Boulder Concert Band National Finalist

The American Prize in Band/Wind Ensemble Performance—Community Division, 2019-20

BOULDER, CO, USA, May 1, 2020 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The Boulder Concert Band, a nonprofit, premier adult community band, today announced that it has been named a finalist in The American Prize National Nonprofit Competitions in the Performing Arts, in the band/wind ensemble performance-community division category.

The American Prize National Nonprofit Competitions in the Performing Arts is the nation's most comprehensive series of contests in the musical arts.

The American Prize is nonprofit, unique in scope and structure, and is designed to evaluate, recognize and reward the best performers, composers, conductors, ensembles and directors in the United States, at professional, college/university, community and school levels, based on submitted recordings. There is no live competition.

In my 20 years as a member, we have been striving to improve the level of our performances. Being a finalist in this prestigious contest is gratifying, and confirms that we are indeed making progress.”

contest is gratifying, and confirms that we are indeed making progress.”

Founded in 2010 and now celebrating its tenth anniversary, The American Prize has awarded nearly $100,000 in prizes in all categories since its creation. Thousands of artists representing all fifty states have derived benefit from their participation in the contests of The American Prize. (www.theamericanprize.org)

About the Boulder Concert Band

Although the COVID19 pandemic stalled its 43rd season, the Boulder Concert Band has a glorious history. The first records of a performing band in the city of Boulder date back to 1870.

Boulder Concert Band

The ICC Silver Cornet Band, as it was known, performed weekly concerts in the pioneer town of Boulder. In the spring of 1897 a larger band organization was formed. This group, called the Boulder Band, was said to be the best organization of its type in Colorado. Several decades later, the Boulder Municipal Band was formed and was the first to include women musicians.

The Boulder Concert Band as we know it today was reorganized in 1976 by the late Hugh McMillen, former Director of Bands at the University of Colorado. Considered to be one of the premier adult community bands in the state, the current organization has more than 60 volunteer musicians. Its members are drawn from the business, professional, and educational communities in the Boulder County and Denver metro area.

The Boulder Concert Band provides the community with outstanding performances of traditional and modern concert literature and enriches the cultural experience of the audience and the musicians.
