The devastating COVID-19 pandemic has added an unparalleled amount of extra stress into Americans' lives, affecting many who had not previously suffered from depression or anxiety. Mental Health America (MHA) has been closely monitoring anxiety levels since February and has seen a sharp increase in anxiety nationally over the past few months. One in five Americans already struggle with mental health, and with the added stress associated with COVID-19, it's even more important that reliable and affordable treatment is available — especially to veterans who are more likely to suffer from depression and anxiety.

Patriot Supreme was founded by Elenburg so he could help his fellow veterans and their families treat psychological disorders as well as chronic pain. He states, "Our long-term vision is that no family should suffer from the aftermath of physical or psychological trauma. Our biggest mission is to provide not only the benefits of high-quality CBD oil products but also to create a community of giving back, a community of warmth, kindness and support." Through its Hero Program, Patriot Supreme customers can gift CBD oil to a veteran in need with any purchase they make.

To treat anxiety, Patriot Supreme CBD oil for veterans can be taken in various forms, all of which
