DELHI, INDIA, May 22, 2020 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Businesses in the industrial age dominated the customers as there was always one-way communication or what they called advertising involved. They were always restricted towards promoting whatever offerings they had to only two channels, mainly TV and radio.

With the advent of the information age business have become quite pensive about their offerings and transformed themselves into brands. The term "brand" has been derived from a sense of ownership that the user feels about the product or service. So, brands are now constantly looking for a customer centric approach in the modern digital world.

The customer centric approach has made it quite difficult for brands to monitor what each and every customer has to say about them. The real world is actually online(virtual) now, thanks to social media! The COVID-19 pandemic has completely transformed all forms of services to digital starting from banking to even education and so businesses are investing huge finances to strengthen their online presence.
