Civility Solutions that were shared at the State of Civility Youth Summit:

Business Civility Prof. Vernet A. Joseph Institute Productive Business Civility practices that include integration of youth within business, education and governmental structures. Develop civility in action within every business on the planet. By creating productive business civility standards that combat incivility at every level of business. Embrace and celebrate National Productive Business Civility Day annually on June 13th. “The most powerful commodity and currency for business is the value of people, their ideas and solutions." - Prof. Vernet A. Joseph

Youth Civility Leader - Elizabeth Curley
Encourage youth to read, to learn as much as they can, be open to new information, and to look for information from unconventional sources. Being knowledgeable and well-read will give us (youth) a solid foundation to build off of. It is part of learning from the wisdom and experiences of previous generations. - Elizabeth Curley

Youth Civility Leader – Dr. Juma Nashon

Youth need to build better ties with authorities. We must cultivate and engineer respectful engagement to have a positive environment that inspire participation, inclusion in matters development. "No One can be a champion in two generations. You can only be a champion in one generation, therefore be all you can be in your time" - Dr. Juma Nashon - Global Youth Civility Spokesperson.

Youth Civility Leader – Vice-Chancellor. Mateus Motolua

Practice Edusophia – which is the divine wisdom inside of you, learn from within and work on yourselves through belief and faith in self. "Every human being is born a genius and originals do not compete." - Prof. Mateus Motolua

Youth Civility Leader – Dr. Anana Phifer-Derilhomme

Be a champion. As The Women & Youth Practitioner, I focus on teaching and assisting leaders in the 4C's Civility, Community, Creativity and Climate Change. We mentor youth in becoming a champion in one or more of these 4 areas around the globe. Become one who fights, defends and educates others in one of these areas. "Our youth deserve an opportunity to learn and lead in the 4C's (Civility, Community, Creativity & Climate Change)." - Dr. Anana Phifer-Derilhomme
