Businesses today are faced with turbulent market, so access to the latest channel intelligence is essential for vendors & channel partners to navigate their way through an evolving channel landscape”

Liam McSherry, Marketing & Strategic Development Director, DISTREE Events

“The lockdown effect has helped drive demand for new categories and the DISTREE format is an ideal solution for brands to formalise routes to market and engage channel partners from across the EMEA region,” commented Andrea Roig, Business Development Director, DISTREE Events. “As e-commerce and online marketplaces expand their reach across EMEA, we are seeing more brands enter the region and find traction in multiple markets. The DISTREE format is an excellent platform for these companies to take the necessary steps to develop their channels.” The DISTREE EMEA exhibition area will also incorporate a new startup village to showcase the latest product innovations and channel services.

A revised agenda and conference revamp

DISTREE EMEA 2021 will feature a refreshed agenda and conference programme that will give both delegates and exhibitors the chance to access more workshops and plenary sessions without missing out on their pre-scheduled meetings. “Traditionally, the DISTREE workshops were held at the same time as the one-on-one meetings. We have reformatted the agenda so participants will no longer have to choose between booking a meeting or attending a workshop,” commented Liam McSherry, Marketing & Strategic Development Director, DISTREE Events.

The DISTREE content sessions will feature a number of keynotes, workshops and panel discussions and are scheduled to take place each morning on Day 2 and Day 3 of the event. The sessions will feature the latest channel insights and business trends impacting tech brands and channel partners operating in the EMEA region.

“Many businesses today face an unpredictable and turbulent market, so access to the latest channel intelligence is even more essential for vendors and channel partners to help them navigate their way through an evolving channel landscape,” commented McSherry. Sessions will be led by some of the channel’s top market research houses and thought leaders.
