We pay particular attention to art packing and crating to ensure that every single piece we are trusted to ship is properly protected in transit. Our team of experienced art handlers works in a fully equipped warehouse in Brooklyn, using only the best and proven materials for packing and crating fine art and antiques. We take all the necessary and preventive measures before handling art pieces, doing our best to stop the spread of the virus while ensuring that our clients get the highest-quality service they deserve.

Fine Art Shippers has been providing art handling and art logistics services in New York since 1995, and we continue to serve art businesses and individuals even during the coronavirus pandemic. While some of our regular international operations are now limited due to certain export/import restrictions and flight cancellations, we keep our other services as smooth and uninterrupted as possible in the current realities. In particular, Fine Art Shippers has expanded national art shuttle options to include a regular art shuttle NYC – Los Angeles running once a month, and we continue to provide a full range of fine art packing and crating services in our warehouse in New York.

Fine Art Shippers is pleased to offer an option of art shuttle service for any need.
