

Windstorm Rips Through Plano

A chimney is blown off a roof and lands in the neighbor's car during a powerful windstorm affecting Plano, Texas.

HOUSTON, TX, USA, July 8, 2020
/EINPresswire.com/ -- Windstorm Rips Through Plano

June 9th, 2019 was a rough day in North Dallas. The region experienced powerful windstorms that toppled a crane, caused extensive damage to crops, and killed a young woman in Dallas. The massive amounts of ping pong ball-sized hail caused considerable roof damage to numerous properties and left thousands without power. Our client, a longtime resident of Plano, Texas was one of the many homeowners impacted by the storm.

Chimney destroyed by windstorm is blown into neighbor's car.

Up, Up, And Away...

Weather reports show average wind speeds during the daylight hours at a whopping 70 miles per hour. Plano saw many of its power poles and large trees knocked down by the winds. Large tree limbs with a circumference of 6 inches are larger broke under the tremendous winds, creating considerable damage on their way down. At our client's property, the windstorm built up enough pressure to tear the chimney off the roof, ultimately smashing down onto the cab of our client's neighbors' truck. Some minor water damage did occur due to the hole in the roof where the chimney used to be. The bulk of the damage happened to the outside of the home.
