Before a couple of years, what is clarified butter was a general query because people hardly could understand the difference between butter and clarified butter. But things are different nowadays. The benefits of ghee in diet clearly explains that ghee clarified butter is a safer and healthier option than normal dairy butter. For example, butter may induce food allergy for lactose intolerants, but ghee is free of lactose and casein and that is why it does not pose the risk of food sensitivity for these people.

But how it is better than butter? According to Milkio spokesperson, Milkio clarified butter offers higher smoke point, which means in comparison to butter it is more stable while cooking. Consumers have reported that they have used Milkio clarified butter as a spread instead of butter, and it's good to eat. In comparison to butter, Milkio ghee clarified butter is much storage-friendly and you can preserve it in the kitchen for 12-18 from the date of manufacturing without refrigeration support. Milkio clarified butter is good for cooking all types of dishes whereas butter fits better with sweet dishes. Even in baking because of higher smoke point ghee is a better butter replacement.

In terms of calorie count also ghee offers higher calorie than butter. Followers of Keto and Paleo diet have found ghee as a better quality fat as fat count in ghee clarified butter is higher than butter. If you compare salted butter and ghee, the salt in butter contains sodium and it is not healthy for patients with heart disease, kidney disease, etc. Ghee clarified butter is a better substitute than dairy butter as it is safe and offers several benefits that butter may not be able to offer its consumers.

How to make clarified butter is a vital point in ghee manufacturing as the production process decides its quality a lot.
