ATLANTA, GEORGIA, US, July 16, 2020 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The Georgia Tech Alumni Association has announced 40 distinguished honorees who have innovated industries and positively impacted communities across the globe. In its first year, more than 250 individuals were nominated by colleagues, peers, and Georgia Tech faculty this April.

Gregory Kolovich MD and graduate of the Georgia Tech College of Engineering with a B.S. in Electrical and Electronic Engineering (BSEEE) is Co-founder and Chief Medical Officer of OXOS Medical, Inc., the advanced orthopedic device innovator and inventor of the Micro C, the world's first handheld fluoroscopy solution. An alumnus of Georgia Tech, Kolovich shares that "Being included in the 40 Under 40 class of 2020 is an inspiration to continue to apply what I learned at Georgia Tech and to value the support of Tech alumni during my life and career." Dr. Kolovich is a practicing orthopedic surgeon at Optim Orthopedics in Savannah, Georgia and serves as President of the Georgia Society for Surgery of the Hand.

Dr. Gregory Kolovich is a Georgia Tech 40 Under 40 Class of 2020 Honoree

In its inaugural year, the 2020 class includes Olympian and breast cancer survivor Chaunte Lowe; computer scientist and poet of code, Joy Buolamwini, who uses art to create a dialogue about the social implications of artificial intelligence; and Maithili Appalwar, who founded Avana to address the alarming rate of suicides among farmers in Yavatmal, a district in Maharashtra, India by working with more than 10,000 farmers to conserve more than 50 billion liters of water.

"I am amazed and humbled by the accomplishments of these innovators and trendsetters. They epitomize the focus that our Georgia Tech alumni have to make the world a better place," shares Dene Sheheane, president of the Georgia Tech Alumni Association.

Those nominated must have completed at least one semester at Georgia Tech, be under the age of 40 as of June 30, 2020, and have made an impact in their profession or community, spanning all industries and sectors. A committee of 26 faculty, staff, and volunteer leaders, who collectively represented all Georgia Tech colleges, scored each nominee using a 25-point rubric. Selection Committee member Bert Reeves, MGT 2000, State Representative in the Georgia House of Representatives, expressed that, "I was blown away at the nearly impossible task of scoring the applicants. These are folks who are not just impacting their community and state, but in some cases, their country and the entire world. It is truly inspiring to see the innovation and passion that our alumni are contributing to many of the greatest issues our world faces today."
