"The most successful people who I know are people who have a lot of self-confidence, drive, and energy. They have known for a very long time, from childhood or from a young age, what they wanted to achieve in life and where they wanted to go, so they have spent a long time planning for that," said Alex Nieora.

"The most important starting point is to be self-motivated with a positive, optimistic outlook. To know what you want to achieve in life. With that state of mind, you can overcome all kinds of obstacles."
