The actress beat hundreds of women in a grueling audition where her unmatched martial arts skills and extraordinary acting skills won her the part as the heel, (villain) character on the show. The show is created and owned by David McLane, creator of the 1980's GLOW - Gorgeous Ladies of Wrestling television series.

Genesis storyline was that she initially joined the wrestling company, but a few bad decisions had her exiled. Now she's back whether they like it or not.”

“Genesis storyline was that she initially joined the wrestling company, but a few bad decisions had her exiled. Now she's back whether they like it or not. She even joins a wrestling gang who also feel the same way about the company, called Exile. Genesis is bad because she wants to be bad!” Said O'Sullivan.

With Netflix reviving the television show GLOW, (Gorgeous Ladies of Wrestling) and female lead roles in film, television and athletics rising, women are being portrayed in strong powerful roles more frequently. Selena says, “GLOW is a fun show. I think the wrestling stunts could be better though, watch out Alison Brie."

"As an actress, I am used to working on set with a crew and a director watching my performance. With this kind of show, not only do we have this, but a whole audience of wrestling fans watch the show live, cheering and in my case booing, all while performing. The directors expect us to get it in one take!"

Selena O'Sullivan can currently be seen in Rag Doll (feature film starring Dot-Marie Jones, role: MMA fighter "Jade") and LA Metro Project (anthology mini series, role: special agent "Agent Lucsyl") Visit Selena on IMDB.
