ESWT (Extracorporeal Shock Wave Therapy) uses the power generated from acoustic sound waves and radial shock waves to stimulate blood vessel growth called neovascularization and angiogenesis. This process forms new blood capillaries, increasing much-needed blood flow to the damaged region. This treatment has been used successfully in many orthopedic areas, which include fractures, joint inflammation, and plantar fasciitis.

Researchers and several studies have shown that low-intensity ESWT is helping people with everyday issues like arthritis, low back pain, tennis elbow, shoulder pain, and various tendinopathies. More studies are being presented daily and the success rates are significant. Orthopedic pain is a growing concern among today's adults, there are many causes including lifestyle, environment, genetics, and illness. ESWT provides a non-drug-oriented solution.

Research shows the system provides significant improvement for those suffering from tennis elbow, low back pain, and the like. The technology is sound, treatments short, and results remarkable."

Dr. Hubert Pare, MD

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention estimates that 50 million American adults have chronic pain, defined as pain most days or every day for at least the past six months. This is an incredibly simple solution for anyone experiencing these issues.

Advanced Medical and Chiropractic medical director, Dr. Hubert Pare, MD stated, "Blood Flow to the damaged area is crucial for healthy joints, muscles and, tendons. People with poor blood flow have a difficult time getting their body to heal itself, this is a fast-non-invasive option. The responses from patients across the U.S have been nothing short of amazing." By increasing vascularity to the damaged area and thereby blood flow, healing processes prove to be quicker and longer-lasting thereby improving the quality of life for everyone," Dr. Pare continued, "Research shows that this treatment provides amazing results for many muscular-skeletal issues, the technology is sound, the treatments are short and the results have been remarkable. I am thrilled with this "non-drug" solution."
