Nevada. It has its roots in the pre-digital era of marketing, first entering the industry when techniques like direct mail were the primary options for businesses that wanted to market themselves effectively. However, as technology advanced, and companies found new opportunities in the digital space, Sprint Data Solutions Worldwide Marketing found that the fundamental lessons of non-digital marketing were even more important and easier to implement in the fast-paced world of digital marketing. It transitioned into this space as well, covering both traditional and digital means of marketing for clients.

Today, Sprint Data Solutions Worldwide Marketing has grown both the scope and the scale of its operations. From only serving Las Vegas, Nevada, the company now services the entire United States, including the markets in Alaska and Hawaii. It's even gone international, helping businesses to move into Mexico, Canada, and even across the Atlantic in nations like France. It still has direct mail marketing as a component of operations, even expanding this to include turn-key direct mail campaigns. However, digital marketing is also part of its range of services, along with more comprehensive data-driven processing of lists for more precise demographic targeting.

Marijuana now finds itself in the same transitional phase as alcohol in the early 20th century, when it was temporarily banned from general use in the United States, and the reintroduced. What was once a strictly illegal substance is now being legalized to various degrees, depending on which state is being looked at. However, Canada, our neighbors to the north, have taken the considerable step of being the only first-world nation thus far to legalize marijuana on a Federal level, making them another viable market.

Within the United States itself, different states are at various stages of the legalization process and taking different approaches to it. Some states, for example, are currently only offering marijuana for legal purchase in strict medical usage. Other states, however, have followed Canada's lead and have fully legalized the sale of all types of marijuana products, including THC and CBD-based products, on a recreational basis.

What Is THC?

Tetrahydrocannabinol, or THC, is the active ingredient in marijuana that is responsible for the narcotic, or psychedelic properties of the drug. Similar to alcohol, THC is what creates the "high" that marijuana usage is best known for. However, unlike more potent, still illegal drugs, such as cocaine, it lacks the same highly physically addictive properties. In that sense, it is even less physically addictive than cigarettes, since nicotine possesses a higher risk of addiction.

What Is CBD?

Cannabidiol, also known as CBD, is also derived from the cannabis plant, but, unlike THC, is not narcotic, nor psychedelic in effect. CBD is the component of marijuana that is best known for the sense of relaxation, well-being, and even pain relief. As a result, CBD has valuable uses outside strict, recreational applications, and can be used for the treatment of anxiety/stress in mental conditions, as well as alleviating chronic pain, such as backaches, joint pain from arthritis, and even minimizing the discomfort of symptoms like nausea and vomiting that arise from intensive cancer treatments.

Many Applications

The combined potential of marijuana products offering THC, CBD, or both, is both broad and promising. Potential entrepreneurs can offer many different products, including:

- Raw Cannabis
- Oil Both THC & CBD
- Vaping Products For THC
- Edibles For THC/CBD
- Capsule For THC/CBD
- Gummy Candy
- CBD Skin Care Products
- Chocolate Bars
- Traditional Joints

And many more.

Knowing The Market

While the sale of marijuana-based products is a lucrative one, this is a venture that also needs to be handled with consideration. Only Canada has a Federal level policy of legalization for both medicinal and recreational marijuana usage, so the market is there is very open.

However, within the USA itself, the legal status of marijuana and associated products varies from state-to-state. Alabama, for example, is still currently illegal for THC products, though medicinal, CBD only products are permissible. Nebraska, on the other hand, has not legalized recreational use of THC products, but has decriminalized marijuana usage, and allows medicinal use of CBD products. California, like Canada, has legalized both recreational THC products as well as CBD medicinal products.

Reaching The Outlets

The critical element for entrepreneurs looking to enter the marijuana market is reaching the dispensaries. These retailers are the cornerstone for getting THC and CBD-based products into the hands of the customers. They know the regulations of the state they operate in, and they know what their customers “on the ground” are looking for.

If you want the most accurate, comprehensive list of marijuana dispensaries for the entire country, we have what you need. Contact Sprint Data Solutions Worldwide Marketing. You’re supporting an American company owned and operated by a disabled veteran.
