On February 27, 2019, the United States Patent and Trademark Office ("USPTO") ruled in favor of HDC on the SVM-RFE Patents in an Interference proceeding between HDC and Intel. The Patent Trial and Appeal Board ("PTAB") held that Health Discovery is entitled to claim exclusive rights to the SVM-RFE technology as set forth in the patent application that was filed to provoke the Interference. The decision ordered Intel's Patent No. 7,685,077 to be cancelled, and dismissed Intel's motions challenging the validity of Health Discovery's patents covering SVM-RFE, and granted a Patent Term Adjustment ("PTA") of 1,785 days (almost 5 years), extending the patent term to June 7, 2025. Health Discovery now has the right to exclude others from using, developing, commercializing or licensing this patented technology without the uncertainty of the Interference proceeding or concerns over the ownership of the SVM-RFE technology.

Health Discovery is the sole owner of all patents related to SVM-RFE, with four issued patents in the United States and five internationally. George H. McGovern, III, HDC's Chairman and CEO, noted, "Health Discovery is taking the necessary steps to protect its sole ownership of SVM-RFE patents against infringement."

Health Discovery has retained the firm of Dunlap, Bennett & Ludwig to represent the Company in this matter. The lawsuit has been filed in the United States District Court for the Western District of Texas, Waco Division where Intel has operations.

Chuck Cantine, Partner at Dunlap, Bennett & Ludwig noted, "The cornerstone of HDC is its extensive patent portfolio concerning breakthrough innovations that further scientific discovery across numerous disciplines. Although HDC encourages collaboration and cooperation among the many that will benefit from its technology, it will vigorously protect and enforce its patent rights when necessary."
