UNITED STATES, August 11, 2020 /EINPresswire.com/ -- “Vote HERE” is a compelling documentary that follows the turbulent ways our voting rights have wavered throughout U.S. history. Renowned historians, journalists, scholars & legal experts share their insight on subjects that include: why the founding fathers left it to the States to control the voting process; the founding of the notorious Electoral College and the roughly 75 year fight for Women’s Suffrage.

The film’s fourteenth and final segment features the late U.S. Representative, and life-long activist, John Lewis, sharing his own personal journey that led him across the Edmund Pettus Bridge in Selma that fateful “Bloody Sunday” in 1965 that led to the passage of the Voting Rights Act.

Along with the film’s historical revelations are the profiles that include non-partisan & non-profit organizations, hard-working activists and spontaneous interviews with the voters themselves sharing their insight, inspiration and hope!

As a tribute to our democracy “Vote HERE” has been made free and as easily accessible as voting should be... And for our viewer’s leisure, Individual Segments of all of the subjects covered in the film have also been made available on all of the platforms listed below:
