Due to the coronavirus, the State of Civility Summit Global Special Needs Inclusion For All: had to be done virtually. The State of Civility Summit Global Special Needs Inclusion For All: can be found at <https://youtu.be/cQi-U3-snOE> Solutions that were shared at the State of Civility Summit Global Special Needs Inclusion For All:

Develop a culture and dialogue that promotes proper people treatment, innovation, ingenuity, and civility in action for the special needs' community. Implement Civility within the business, education, and governmental rank structures. Embrace, participate, and celebrate National Productive Business Civility Day annually on June 13th. "The most powerful commodity and currency for business is the value of people, their ideas and solutions." - Prof. Vernet A. Joseph

Dr. Robin Lococo Founder of Challenged Champions & Heroes National Awareness Day states, "As you see a Challenged Champion stop and say hello, be kind and smile, if they are nonverbal just ask their name and complement them about something. Oh, that's a beautiful color blouse you're wearing. Even though they may not be able to respond back, you will definitely see a response in their own special way of communicating. Offer your time and help to a Caregiver, offer to run errands, or provide a time of respite for them. Be there for your community, let them you are there to show love and respect!"

Understand and realize that we can learn from the special needs' community. Allow them to be the role models and teach us. Appreciate the special needs community and see them as Champions and Heroes. Get involved beyond the moment and become a part of the movement. Dr. Ruben West

Create inclusion for the entire family and show love, support and civility to them. Teach inclusion from early childhood education. Instead of punishing the pusher or biter, teach the children social distancing and how to teach everyone as individuals with different needs. Schools should have a universal design and not exclude differently abled children from the classes but teach civility and acceptance from 0-99years old. Dr. Rebecca Harper

I believe that accepting people for who they are and not what they look like is a major step into inclusion. I also believe that we need to involve Special Needs people in regular activities as much as possible. This would give them a feeling of acceptance and worth. Dr. Penny

Champion the ownership of business and entrepreneurial spirit within the special needs population. I have witnessed several of our differently abled family running businesses with help or oversight of mentors; and all of them are doing well and profitable. Advocate further education through colleges and universities tailoring curriculum to help foster the individual's talents. Donate to fund college opportunities for the special needs community. I established a "College Fund Bank Account" scholarship that assists those in need. Dr. Tony Branch

We need to implement the Human Equity Value as a human policy. Human Equity Value is the Recognition, Consideration, Protection and Procurement of Human Value and the Equity they are entitled to. We need to write HEV concept into policy through what I call Human Value Procurement (HVP). Create a platform for Challenged Champions and Heroes. A platform where we bring together their stories of inspiration so that they have the opportunity to know that they inspire folks without special needs. This helps to give them Human Equity Value. Dr. Glendon Rudder

Dr. Clyde Rivers states, "I am honored to be able to work alongside such amazing people, who are changing the world and creating a culture of honor and civility. Each one is an icon and a difference maker."
