

ANNOUNCING NATIONAL FAITH AND BLUE WEEKEND: A Public-Private Collaborative Effort to Build Bridges and Break Biases

Law Enforcement Unites with the Faith Community for a Nationwide Weekend of Resolution and Reconciliation

ATLANTA, GA, UNITED STATES, August 7, 2020 /EINPresswire.com/ -- MovementForward, Inc. and the U.S. Department of Justice Office of Community Oriented Policing Services (COPS Office) along with other national law enforcement groups are jointly organizing the most consolidated police-community engagement project in recent history - National Faith and Blue Weekend (NFBW) with FirstNet, Built with AT&T as its presenting sponsor. The mission of NFBW is to facilitate safer, stronger and more unified communities by connecting law enforcement officers and residents through local houses of worship.

"Finding common ground and ensuring justice for all starts with collaborative and respectful communication and the National Faith and Blue Weekend is evidence of leadership by example," said Jason Porter, senior vice president, FirstNet Program at AT&T. "Through its mission-focused and highly diverse group of faith-based and policing organization leaders, this initiative is laser-focused on facilitating positive and actionable community relations between citizens and law enforcement across our Nation. As America's public safety partner, it's our honor to support this grassroots effort to strengthen police-community relations in neighborhoods across the country."

As the nation continues to grapple with recent discord between law enforcement and some of the communities they serve, this weekend will serve as NFBW's first installation to address an urgent yet longstanding need for authentic collaboration between law enforcement and citizens.

"Given the compounded stresses of the COVID-19 pandemic and the unprecedented strains on police-community relations, our nation's law enforcement professionals need the support, assistance and partnership of the faith community in every neighborhood in America," says Phil Keith, Director of the United States Department of Justice Office of Community Oriented Policing Services (COPS Office).

Collaborations between law enforcement and local groups – especially faith-based organizations – are invaluable force-multipliers for creating safer and more engaged communities. NFBW will positively impact Americans by directly engaging community influencers, residents and law enforcement professionals in every state across the U.S.

“Our pathway to progress around policing as a nation is a collaborative one that focuses on our commonalities rather than our differences,” says Reverend Markel Hutchins, National Lead Organizer, One Congregation One Precinct initiative (OneCOP) and President & CEO, MovementForward, Inc. “Because sixty million Americans attend weekly gatherings at more than 350,000 houses of worship nationwide, nothing rivals the depth and breadth of influence presented by houses of worship who are unique and powerful gateways to the heart of communities in which they have a mutual interest in achieving effective police-community engagement.”

NFBW is slated for October 9 – 11, 2020 with planned activities such as community dialogues, service projects and other interactive experiences to help foster on-going, authentic and mutual community-law enforcement trust.

NFBW is an unprecedented national law enforcement-community engagement project involving nearly every major national law enforcement group in the United States of America along with the three entities in the federal government that deal most directly with policing. On April 27, 2020, led by Director Keith and Reverend Hutchins, the heads of each of the following organizations participated in the initial meeting:

- Office of Community Oriented Policing Services, United States Department of Justice
- Office of Justice Programs, United States Department of Justice
- Bureau of Justice Assistance, United States Department of Justice
- Federal Law Enforcement Officers Association
- International Order of Police
- Hispanic American Police Command Officers Association
