

Alina Fortenberry is Featured in Exclusive Two-Part Online Interview with Thrive Global

Education consultant Alina Fortenberry took the time to discuss the current state of the educational landscape and her motivations behind her career choice.

MUSKEGON, MICHIGAN, UNITED STATES, August 13, 2020 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Educational Consultant Alina Fortenberry recently sat down with the interview platform Thrive Global to discuss her professional milestones while providing insight into the evolution of education. Thrive Global is an American-based company that provides behavior technology, media support, and science-based solutions to unlock performance and enhance the overall well-being of readers.

As an experienced professional with a strong academic background, Alina Fortenberry has served in a wide range of educational roles including Master Reading Coach, Educational Consultant, Principal, and Vice Principal. With a background in school administration, curriculum development, team building, professional learning communities and coaching, Fortenberry understands the passion required for inspiring today's youth and discusses the characteristics needed to be a successful educator:

"A successful educator has a passion and commitment for teaching...A successful educator builds relationships of mutual respect with and amongst students showing their passion and commitment to student learning, by being a trustworthy supporter, motivator, and engaging students in the learning process." - Alina Fortenberry

Fortenberry has dedicated her career to helping cultivate safe learning environments, and as an experienced educator, she takes pride in helping motivate educators and students succeed. She is happy to provide advice for those looking to enter the education field or on other educational tips regarding educational leadership and curriculum and instruction specifically in the area of reading.
