Prioritizing your wants and needs should be at the forefront of your search when finding the right Bankruptcy Lawyer. The Bankruptcy process will be stressful, so don't just look for cost when deciding on what Lawyer to go with. You will want a lawyer who is accessible and is not reliant on assistants to handle your case.

To Begin your search for a Bankruptcy Lawyer in Houston you might want to do some research on the National Association of Consumer Bankruptcy Attorneys website.. This is an important first step in what should be a thorough search for the right Lawyer. After narrowing down your list dig into review and rating websites in helping you decide on the right Bankruptcy Lawyer. Keep in mind some lawyer review sites are biased to the Lawyers listed, due to paid listings and top of page advertising (Something that Best Rated Houston does not practice).

After your research is complete, call and speak to the lawyer who will be handling your case. Ask about fees, and payment plans. Most Bankruptcy lawyers will charge a fixed rate, and the rate will be determined by the complexity of your case. Also ask if their office is up-to date with the latest business-client technology. I consider this important due to the fact you will be submitting many documents, and you will need to sign and submit documents along the bankruptcy process.

Expect the Bankruptcy process to last at least 3 months from filing to discharge. This time frame will be dependent on the court, COVID-19 restrictions, and court caseload.
