Award winners will be announced through a special virtual event in early October and will join a lifelong community of esteemed Entrepreneur Of The Year alumni from around the world. Jessica is passionate about leveling the playing field around language access.

TCS Interpreting's mission is to provide world-class language access to the Deaf community. We believe robust native language access is a human right. We envision a world where every individual has the autonomy to determine their own native language choice.

Entrepreneur Of The Year is one of the preeminent competitive award programs for entrepreneurs and leaders of high-growth companies. The nominees are evaluated based on six criteria, including overcoming adversity; financial performance; societal impact and commitment to building a values-based company; innovation; and talent management. Since its launch, the program has expanded to recognize business leaders in more than 145 cities in over 60 countries around the world.

“Being born and raised by Deaf parents, I became aware early on of the reality of not having language access and the barriers a Deaf individual needs to navigate. This early life lesson not only shaped my method of communication, it molded my outlook on life and the need to advocate for the Deaf community,” shared Jessica Moseley, CEO of TCS Interpreting, “The importance of language access for all motivated me to join my parents in the business they started and eventually assume the role of CEO, leading a company where access, inclusivity and leveling the playing field are our core values which shape each and every decision. Being a finalist for Ernst & Young’s Entrepreneur Of The Year is a huge honor. I am so excited to have this opportunity to share my story as a passionate advocate for language resource accessibility. Thank you!”
