

Author Joseph Roccasalvo to be Featured on Close Up Radio

NEW YORK, NEW YORK, UNITED STATES, August 26, 2020

/EINPresswire.com/ -- Novels are a quest for meaning, an exploration of what William Faulkner referred to as "the human heart in conflict with itself." The act of writing implies taking a risk.

As a student, author Joseph Roccasalvo studied the classics, philosophy, literature and theology. He even received a PhD in Comparative Religion from Harvard with a specialty in Buddhism. But something was missing.

"All this knowledge certainly allowed me to be a good academic," recalls Roccasalvo, "but I said to myself:

'Joseph, it's time for you to stop using other people's ideas and research and draw on your own experience.' That's when I began to explore my imagination."

What followed was a creative tsunami. Stories poured out of him, one after another.

Today, Roccasalvo has published five novels: Fire in a Windless Place, Chartreuse, Portrait of a Woman, The Odor of Sanctity and The Devil's Interval; four novellas: The Powers That Be, Beyond the Pale, Island of the Assassin, and Alina in Ecstasy; a collection of poetry: Poems for Two Violins; and a collection of stories entitled Twists of Faith.

"I'm very keen on doing what the classical writers always insisted on: you must entertain," says Roccasalvo. "You have to give your reader a reason for turning the page."

Great writers must be great listeners to what is happening in their imagination. Roccasalvo considers his novels to be “spiritual thrillers.”

“As a writer, I’m an agent of transformation,” says Roccasalvo. “I find my characters in some sense are very much like myself: filled with surprises. The audience does not know what is going to happen. I myself frequently don’t know what’s going to happen. I’m learning the story as I write it. I become both reader and writer at the same time.”

Close Up Radio will feature Joseph Roccasalvo in an interview with Jim Masters on August 28th at 1pm EDT
