The track which resonates most for Levi is the powerful ballad “Hope You’re Doin’ Well”, dedicated to his best friend Wyatt who tragically passed away; it holds a special place in his heart as growing up with him and losing him at a young age left an ache in his heart.

When asked about what inspires his songwriting, Levi explains, “Right now, in my life, I am shiftin’ gears from being focused for so long on my hockey career to now focusing on my music career. These songs are all a piece of me, having been written about true events in my life. I wanted everything I put out there to be a true piece of me or a memory of something that had happened in my life.”

Levi has a friendly, down-to-earth manner and understands how country music connects to the everyday struggles of hard-working individuals. He knows how a good song could touch the lives of the people and speak to their hearts. The singer/songwriter is thankful for everything he experienced in his life – both the good and the bad. It has provided him a positive point of view on life and helped him form his music.
