

New Book, Different Like Me, Encourages Kids to Celebrate Diversity

GRAND RAPIDS, MI, USA, August 31, 2020 /EINPresswire.com/ -- In the new book, Different Like Me (Our Daily Bread Publishing), children ages 3 to 7 discover that being different is okay, and that what they have in common is more important than what they don't. With fanciful, full-color illustrations, readers follow a diverse group of kids as they work together toward a surprising and delightful conclusion.

Sometimes the things that make us different can leave us feeling like a fish out of water. Different Like Me takes young readers on a whimsical journey where each unique child works with the others to launch a giant colorful fish balloon. Along the way, the children learn to celebrate differences and uncover what they all have in common, so that even a "fish out of water" finds belonging.

Different Like Me features a wonderful variety of children with unique qualities. It is based on a story that the author, Xochitl E. Dixon, wrote years ago to explain to her own children the beauty of God's diverse world. You'll also enjoy the engaging questions you can use to start conversations about diversity with the children in your own life.

In Different Like Me, you'll discover:

- The beauty of diversity—cultural, physical, and more
- Rhyming words and a repetitive refrain that capture kids' attention
- Conversation-starting questions around the topic of diversity
- A valuable addition to school, church, and home libraries
