Chief Financial Officer John Cassil

“Financial stability has always been important to us, but this year has certainly brought this to the forefront for many. Our Customers and policyholders rely on American Fidelity products to help protect their own finances in case they become disabled and from the high costs of accidents, cancer, long hospital stays and other medical expenses. Having a third-party rating of our financial strength helps them know we are a Company they can trust,” said Chief Financial Officer John Cassil.
